NO SETTLEMENT IN BUTTONWOOD FARMS DISPUTE

Differing Parties Unable To Reach Agreement; Management Said To Be Issue.

Settlement of the differences between the receivers of the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company and H. N. Gitt, trustee, and S. G. Spangler, a lien creditor, seeking to set aside confirmation of the sale of the property in the upper end of the county, had not been reached today.

Although an agreement out of court was predicted Tuesday, it is said by attorneys interested that the parties on both sides of the litigation fence are as far apart as ever. Operation of the five farms in Huntington and Latimore townships during the present litigation is said to be the stumbling block in the path of a settlement.

Seeks Good Title

H. N. Gitt, trustee, who purchased the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company last September at a receivers' sale, was said by attorneys to have been willing to make liberal allowance for the operation of the five farms, pending settlement of the present court matter, so that eventually he may secure a "good" title to the properties he purchased.

The three receivers, appointed by the court, are said to be unwilling-ing to continue the operation of the farms because of the uncertainty attached to the business, making it almost impossible, it was stated, to hire farmers and orchardists to look after the extensive agricutural and horticultural interests of the five farms.

Mr. Gitt is said to have made the proposition that he would give the receivers all stock and equipment on the farms, which he purchased recently as trustee for the use of the receivers, if they would operate the farms until the present court matter is settled.

One of the attorneys in the present litigation today said a settlement was not imminent, nor would he predict what report would be made to Judge D. P. McPherson in court here Thursday.

It was said that it is entirely likely that the court will direct the three receivers to continue the operation of the farms pending the outcome of the litigation. April 1 was the day on which the properties in the concern were to have been turned over to Mr. Gitt as trustee.

His action in court here last Saturday in asking that confirmation of the sale to him be set aside was based on the allegation that the receivers were not empowered to sell the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company free and divested of all liens and encumbrances.

He was joined in his action by Mr. Spangler, who contended, as a lien creditor of the Buttonwood Orchard Farms' Company, that his interests as a creditor would be jeopardized if the confirmation were consummated as returned to the court.

STATE TO PLANT 10 MILLION TREES

Department of Forests and Waters Announces Heavy Demand For Trees This Spring.

Secretary Stuart announced today that ten million forest trees will be shipped this spring from the nurseries operated by the State Department of Forests and Waters. From the Mont Alto Nusery in Franklin county there will be shipped 3,700,000 trees. The Clearfield nursery comes second with 3,500,000 trees, and the Greenwood nursery in Huntingdon county will contribute 1,200,000 trees. In spite of the late spring, more than 400,000 trees have been shipped already.

The demand for forest trees has been so great this spring that the entire nursery supply, except a few short-leaf pine, were allotted months ago. Several hunred forest land owners, who were disappointed in not getting trees this year, have already filed their applications for trees for the spring of 1927.

Forest tree planting will be featured this spring in every county of the state. The 10,000,000 trees that will be planted will bring back to production more than 9,000 acres of land. In 50 years, when many of these trees will be large enough to cut, they will produce more than 300,000,000 board feet of lumber urgently needed by the people and industries of the state.

ADAMS IS GOOD WHEAT PRODUCER

County Is Among Ten Listed by State as Producing More Than Half Grown in Pennsylvania.

Ten counties, including Adams, produced more than one-half of the 22,719,953 bushels of wheat grown in Pennsylvania in 1925, officials of the state department of agriculture announced today. Adams county produced 822,219 bushels.

The other counties are Lancaster, York, Franklin, Berks, Cumberland, Chester, Lebanon, Lehigh and Bucks and make up what is known as the "bread basket" of Pennsylvania.

Department reports also disclosed that the average yield of 22.9 bushels to the acre was almost twice the 1925 United States' average of 12.7 bushels.

In the total acreage seeded to wheat in 1925 and in the yield to the acre Lancaster takes first place. Chester county while ranking second in yield is sixth in total production due to the acreage while Franklin though third in production is eighteenth in the yield to the acre.

The production by counties was Lancaster, 2,838,330 bushels; York, 2,286,900 bushels; Franklin, 1,522,368; Berks, 1,148,514; Cumberland, 1,088,906; Chester, 988,613; Lebanon, 755,055; Lehigh, 693,450, and Bucks, 671,308.

JOHN H. WILDASIN DIES ON TUESDAY

Brother of Samuel Wildasin, Near Littlestown, Succumbs to Pleuro-Pneumonia.

The death of John Henry Wildasin, proprietor of a coal and wood yard, Hanover, following an illness of less than a week, came as a shock to his many friends as word of it became known during the noon hour Tuesday. Mr. Wildasin, who was 47 years of age, passed away at his home about 11 o'clock Tuesday.

Death was due to pleuro-pneumonia following upon an attack of influenza. Mr. Wildasin had been confined to bed since last Wednesday evening. His parents are Valentine and Elizabeth Wildasin, Hanover. His death occurred on the twenty-first anniversary of his wedding to Miss Katie Hull, which took place on March 30, 1905.

Mr. Wildasin had been proprietor of the coal and wood yard for about five years. Previously he had been associated in business with members of the firm of the Globe clothing store, Hanover, and later was proprietor of a jewelry store. He was a faithful member of St. Mark's Lutheran church, Hanover, where he served on the council as deacon and was also an officer in St. Mark's Sunday school.

Surviving are the parents, the wife and two sons and a daughter, Wilbert James, Harry Hull and Maria Elizabeth Wildasin, at home. Two brothers also survive, Samuel, near Littlestown, and Jacob Wildasin, Hanover. Funeral will be private and will be held at the house Friday morning at 10 o'clock, the Rev. John S. Tome, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran church, officiating. Interment in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

25 FOREST FIRES FIRST 3 MONTHS

The first forest fires of spring are occurring locally throughout the state. Chief Forest Fire Warden George H. Wirt announced today that the entire state is organized for the effective handling of all forest fires. Only 25 forest fires were reported during the first three months of this year. The latter part of April and the first two weeks of May are usually the most serious periods of the spring fire season. No serious fire situation is anticipated before the 15th of April, except in the southern part of the state and on southern slopes in the North Tier country. More than 3,600 forest fire wardens are now engaged in protecting the forests of the state.

NO REDUCTION OF COAL PRICES

Local Dealers Announce That Customary Slash Will Not be Granted Here This Season.

Consumers of hard coal in Gettysburg, Adams county and elsewhere will help to pay expenses of the recent prolonged strike of the anthracite miners. This became known today when local coal dealers said the usual April first reduction of from fifty to seventy-five cents a ton on anthracite coal will not go into effect this year.

"We must pay the same price for the coal and can only cut the price when the operators give us a reduction," one local coal man said this morning.

Local dealers say the supply of hard coal on hand just about meets the demand. The mines are sending out coal, not as ordered, but pro rata among dealers throughout the country, so that no one retailer has large stocks of nut, stove and red ash on hand.

Local prices of anthracite are $14.50 for nut and stove sizes and $15.50 for the red ash anthracite.

Many householders formerly laid in their winter's supply of coal in the spring and summer months when prices were usually shaded in previous years, but that custom is expected to be foregone this year, with prices remaining the same as in the winter.

Present prices of anthracite average from fifty to seventy-five cents a ton higher than those asked at the beginning of the strike last September.

YOUNG BURGLAR IS HELD IN JAIL

MUCH INTEREST IN POLITICAL SITUATION HERE

G. O. P. Chairmanship Hangs Fire; Democrats Have Large Slate For Committee.

With interest in state-wide politics ebbing somewhat with the passing of the last day to file nominating papers in Harrisburg, interest of politicians in Gettysburg and Adams county is turning to strictly local contests.

Among Republicans in Adams county interest centers upon the election of a county chairman and members of the Republican county committee. Democrats have only to elect county committeemen, the chairman of that party being elected, in turn, by the men and women named to the county committee.

The difference in the form of electing a county chairman between the Republican and Democratic ranks lies within the constitutions of the two parties. It has been customary in recent years for the voters to elect the chairman of the Republican county committee, but in the Democratic party the committeemen meet shortly after their election and choose the man who shall be their chairman.

J. P. Oyler Undecided

J. Price Oyler, Gettysburg, the present chairman of the Republican county committee, was elected by the committeemen, when Robert C. Miller, his predecessor in office, resigned to become postmaster here. Although he expceted to be a candidate for re-election, Mr. Oyler today said he was not yet ready to announce his candidacy.

Aspirants for committee positions in each of the two major political parties have until April 20 in which to file nominating papers at the office of the county commissioners. Election of the committeemen takes place at the primary elcetion in May.

Already seven Democrats and three Republicans have filed nominating papers at the commissioners' office for committee positions. No papers have yet been filed for the Republican county chairmanship, and as yet none are in circulation, so far as can be learned.

7 Democrats File

Of the seven Democrats who have filed, five are seeking positions as committeemen and committeewomen from the First Ward. They are William Stitely, Roy P. Funkhouser, Mrs. Susie Dougherty, Joseph Maguire and Miss Edna Eicholtz. From the Second Ward Harry C. Gilbert has filed, with D. G. Sell, Union township, the only candidate from beyond the limits of Gettysburg.

Republicans who have filed for committee positions are Jacob Sharrah and Bruce Biesecker, Franklin township, and Annie Marsh, Gettysburg, Third Ward.

MARCH LEAVES IN SNOW RAGE

Only Rain Falls in G-Burg, But Rest of Country Suffers From Heavy Fall of Snow.

March started to enter the realm of history in Gettysburg this morning with a light fall of rain, interspersed with freezing temperature, only to recede a bit and resume its normal average temperature. If the last day of March is a forecast of what April will bring, rubbers, slickers and umbrellas will be the prevailing fashionable attire.

From the Rocky Mountain region east and south, including virtually all of the central, southern and southwestern states, the country was lashed by the pent-up fury of the parting March disturbance.

Out of the Rockies, where it had harbored for several days, the March lion swept over the plain states and down to the foot of the Texas plains it stretched, leaving a blanket of white that varied in depth from a few inches to more than a foot.

Texas Worst Sufferer

East of the Missouri river snow was reported falling from Madison, Wis., on the north down into central Illinois and Indiana and on the east from Wisconsin to New England.

The storm fatalities and property damage occurred in southeast Texas. A high wind, accompanied by heavy rain, cut a swath through the oil fields near Liberty, where two men were killed. At Houston, Beaumont, Sealy and Orange considerable damage was done to business establishments.

Milady Awaits Easter Sunday With Her New Easter Frock, While Even Men Prepare to Don Spring Attire

Despite the inclement weather, not entirely unexpected, Gettysburgians and Adams countians are making preparations for the observance of Easter and the official closing of the Lenten season.

Gorgeous frocks of varied hues will be the eye-pleasing spectacle on Sunday, when Milady emerges from the confines of a long winter and rather arduous spring, bedecked in the gayest of spring fashions, designed especially to please even the most fastidious

Gettysburg merchants are heralding the Easter season with the largest array of Easter dresses, coats, hats, shoes, and other accessories ever seen on display in local stores. Wherever one turns, the ever prevalent Easter season is predicted in brightly colored gowns, sport suits, snappy shoes, pumps and silks and satins of the finest, designed in the smartest of fashions.

Milady makes her most pleasing appearance on Easter Sunday.

It is her first opportunity to relieve herself of the arduous task of dressing for winter. "Women are showing more taste and conservativeness in selecting their Easter frocks this year than ever before," said one merchant, another indication that Dame Fashion's decrees are adhering to the particular demands of those showing smart judgment in dress selection.

And the men will not go unnoticed. Local tailors are rushed with demands for Easter suits. Even in the styles for men, as in women's dress, lavish colors are predominant, while the conservative and lasting blues, browns and greys still retain their position of prominence.

Weather forecasts announce a bright and sunny Easter. This gives vent to increased enthusiasm and the stores will be well crowded the balance of the week in preparation for Eastertide.

Eddie Plank Memorial Chairman Appeals to Local Residents For Contributions to Gym Project

An appeal to the public spirited citizens of Gettysburg and Adams county for contributions to the Eddie Plank Memorial Fund was made today by Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, chairman of the memorial committee. In calling the attention of local residents to the memorial, Doctor Hanson stressed the nation-wide interest already attached to the project and the privilege of Gettysburgians and Adams countians to share this interest with the rest of the nation.

"In dedicating the Gettysburg College gymnasium to the memory of Eddie Plank," said Doctor Hanson, "the committee recalled the gentlemanly conduct of the late hurler, his clean, fair and square sportsmanship on the field during his seventeen years' activity in the Major Leagues and the respect and admiration the late 'Eddie' had for his thousands of admirers. We also had in mind the national appeal a memorial project in Gettysburg would have and the attraction such a proposition would hold for the millions of tourists who visit Gettysburg. The Philadelphia Nationals and the Philadelphia Athletics will play a benefit game for the memorial fund and it is a privilege for residents of Gettysburg and Adams county to help honor the memory of one of its most prominent heroes."

Contributions should be sent to the Eddie Plank Memorial Fund Committee, c-o The Gettysburg Times or P. O. Box 376, Gettysburg, Pa.

Chapman's Hopes Are Fading Away

(By Associated Press.)

Wethersfield Prison, Conn., March 31.—With only six days left before Gerald Chapman, mail robber and bootlegger, is scheduled to go to the gallows for murder, his attorneys today were undecided for their first time in their long legal fight to save him what their next move would be.

Rebuffed at every turn, F. J. Groehl, chief defense counsel, has admitted that "the situation is very tense."

Mr. Groehl spent the entire day yesterday working on a new witness angle of the case which he hopes will be effective in an effort to secure a new trial. He produced a "mystery witness" at the prison in the person of a tall elderly man who wanted to see Chapman to verify an identification that he had already made from photographs, but prison authorities refused him permission to see the condemned man.

Notorious Thief Is Captured Today

(By Associated Press.)

Lancaster, March 31.—"Abe" Buzzard, notorious chicken thief of the Welsh mountains who has spent more than 40 years behind the bars, was captured early today in the home of a friend in the mountains on a charge of chicken stealing. The outlaw who recently declared he was done with thieving, having turned evangelist, declared he had reformed.

Buzzard was arrested by two state policemen and Constable Maurice Edy of this county. He is accused of robbing the hen coops of George Shrom, of Chester county. A nephew, Ferrel Barnes, of Reading, was captured in December for the same offense, but the search for Buzzard continued until today. Buzzard denies he is guilty, saying he has walked the straight path since his release. He was taken to Reading.

LETTERS SOLVE MURDER-SUICIDE

(By Associated Press.)

New York, March 31.—Letters found in possession of a young man who committed suicide after shooting and killing his sweetheart in a taxicab today provided police with a clue in solving the tragedy.

The letters indicated that the couple were Christine Spaeon, a waitress, and Peter Patrissi, a gasoline station owner.

One of the letters found in the man's possession read, "I am standing on the brink of eternity at last as reckless of the future as I have been of the past. Christine, you are the breakage of my home and my success."

Another letter signed Christine showed that the girl questions the man's love.

Strong Buying On New York Exchange

(By Associated Press.)

New York, March 31.—Strong buying support was provided at the opening of today's stock market and prices bounded upward in all sections of the list. There were few remaining soft spots. Buying and selling orders in the major portion of the list began to balance after a rush to take profit at the early high levels caused recessions throughout the list of one to three points. Signs that the corrective process had not been completed were shown by scattered liquidations especially in the low priced railroads. Call money remained unchanged at five per cent.

FARM WOODLOT PAYING PROJECT

That the farm woodlot pays is shown by the figures supplied the State Department of Forests and Waters by J. C. Brubaker of Lititz, Lancaster county. Several years ago the buildings on his farm near Lititz were destroyed by fire. When confronted with the problem of rebuilding the barn, his attention was called to the material in his farm woodlot. After a number of conferences he was convinced that this material would be very helpful in rebuilding his barn. A sawmill was brought to the woodlot, and with the exception of some siding and flooring material, enough lumber was cut from the small tract to furnish all the dimension stuff for the large barn and several other buildings. Mr. Brubaker estimates that his little woodlot contributed approximately $1,800 worth of lumber.

This spring Mr. Brubaker started the replanting of his cut-over woodlot. Recently a demonstration forest tree planting was conducted on his farm with Foresters from the Department of Forests and Waters and State College in attendance. Mr. Brubaker said: "I may never see the lumber from these small planted trees, but I want to see to it that a future wood supply is insured for anyone who may live on this farm."

SCRIBES DIFFER ON HEALTH BEER

Reporters Clash Over Value of Beer; One Says It Is Good, Another Says It Is Bad.

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, March 31.—Sale of the new 3.75 per cent beer tonic was defended today by Assistant Secretary Andrews in charge of prohibition as "practicable and reasonable."

Chicago, March 31.—With the announcement that the Pabst Brewery, of Milwaukee, Wis., was one of the concerns licensed to manufacture 3.75 per cent beer tonic, Chicago newspapers hurried reporters to the Wisconsin city. Their views conflict. One said the brew was good; another said it was medicine.

Here is the adverse description of the beer.

"It lacks the semblance of beer in color, texture and taste and requires a healthy 'chaser' or near-beer to rid one of the after taste. Of the appearance of thick molasses and practically as sirupy, it is so heavily laden with malt and hops as to make it bitter."

The other reporter who returned the favorable verdict wrote:

"Your correspondent was at Windsor, Canada, when the spigot was turned on for 3.75 per cent beer. He sampled it conscientiously as per instructions. He stands ready to depose without fear of contradiction that this new product so far surpasses it that comparisons are impossible."

HIGH NINE WILL PLAY MIDDLETOWN HERE SATURDAY

Maroon and White Tribe Stacks Up in Good Shape in Anticipation of Championship Season.

The Maroon and White nine started their second week of practice on Monday in preparation for their opening game Saturday with Middletown High on the Playground diamond.

The squad is in good shape and, barring accidents, the team will be able to put their full strength into action.

Monday's workout consisted of a long drill for both infielders and outfielders which was followed by batting practice. Dale Bream, "Screetchie" Bream, Gibbs and J. Bream performed in the outfield. Dale Bream and W. Bream, members of last year's team, are assured of their old positions at left and center respectively. In right field Gibbs and J. Bream are the two most likely contenders. Gibbs, who will take his regular turn on the mound, will also be used in right-field. Much is expected of him this season. J. Bream is also expected to be seen in right field.

Coach Reynolds has succeeded in developing a fine infield in Myers, Knox, Bowers and Utz. Myers, who guards the hot corner, is a member of last year's champs and can be depended upon to play his usual steady game. "Bud" Knox at short needs no introduction to the fans. Much is experted of him both at bat and in the field. "Stiffy" Bowers at second is another York Springs product. Bowers is making his debut in a Maroon and White uniform and shows promise of developing into a valuable player. "Eddie" Utz, star hurler on last year's undefeated team, is being groomed for first base. "Eddie" shows promise and may be depended upon to take care of his share of the work. Utz is not expected to work on the mound but in a tight place the little twirler may be called upon.

Behind the bat is the ever dependable "Jake" Weikert. "Jake" is pilot of this year's team and is hoping for another winning club. Tennant and Gibbs will alternate on the mound. "Jim" is showing his old stuff and should go better than ever. Gibbs looks good as Tennant's mate and these two giants are expected to win many games before the season closes.

Rebuked For Smoking Woman Kills Herself

Chicago, March 31.—Mrs. Rose Dykman attended a dinner party Sunday night at the Joliet Country Club with her husband and another married couple, and was rebuked by the club steward for smoking, which humiliated her deeply. On the way home, and after arriving at their flat, her husband chided her for violating the rules of the club.

Later she locked herself in the bathroom and swallowed poison. She was rushed to a hospital, but efforts to restore life were unavailing. She had scribbled a farewell note to her husband in the automobile as they came home.

STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS URGING BIG VOTE

Issues Appeal To Members To Cast Ballot Primary Day; Duty of Everyone.

The Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce is making a special appeal to its membership representing more than 40,000 business concerns in the state, to register and vote at the coming primary election. In a special message to business men, members of the state chamber, President Alba B. Johnson points out the importance of selecting the proper type of men and women for the many offices to be filled at the next election. Mr. Johnson's appeal in part is as follows:

"Our membership is urged to recognize the extreme importance of the uniform primary election to be held in this state on Tuesday, May 18.

"At this election candidates will be nominated by all political parties for the following offices: Member of the United States Senate for the period of six years; thirty-six members of the House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States; governor of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania; lieutenant governor, secretary of internal affairs; twenty-six members of the state Senate; two hundred and eight members of the state House of Representatives.

Select Proper Man

"The importance of selecting the proper type of men and women for these offices should be apparent to the business man at a glance and it is not therefore necessary for me to point this out further than to say that the successful aspirants will largely shape your destinies and determine questions of vital importance to you for some years to come.

"Extreme care should therefore be exercised by you to see that the nominees at the primary election are well qualified for the office they seek and are competent to properly gauge and weigh the questions that are presented to them.

"In order that you may be qualified to vote at this primary election, it is necessary that all eligible citizens who did not register for the general election last November must register for the primary.

"The days set by law for the registration of citizens of boroughs and townships have gone by, but there is still time for the great mass of citizens resident of the cities of the state to get their names on the registration list so as to vote at the primary on May 18.

Only Half Vote

"At the last primary election for United States Senators four years ago less than fifty per cent of all our eligible citizens cast their votes for candidates for this important office. This is directly contrary to our form of government and there is no more important duty confronting our citizens than to aid in the selection and election of proper candidates for public office.

"To our organization members such as boards of trade, chambers of commerce and trade bodies generally, this chamber appeals for your cooperation and support in this important matter.

"You are respectfully urged to present the question of registration and voting not only to your own members, but to the citizens of your separate communities. This cannot be done too strongly.

"There is no question of more vital importance confronting us today than that of citizenship, which means a voice in your government by the selection of able candidates for public office."

WOULD PLACE BAN ON "THIRD DEGREE"

Philadelphia, Mar. 31.—"Third degree" inquisitions of persons suspected of crime were condemned in a report submitted Monday by the crime survey committee, appointed four years ago by the board of judges of the common pleas courts.

Citing the confession of fourteen-year-old William Cavalier, of Pottsville, said to have been obtained by police late at night, after a long grilling and under which he was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder, the committee recommended that the obtaining of similar confessions be prohibited in favor of examinations supervised by high judicial officials.

INSTALMENT 33

"His Majesty will confirm it, monsieur?" he said interrogatively, and he shook his head. "That is a risk I dare not run. My warrant sets me under imperative obligations which I must discharge—you will see the justice of what I state."

His tone was all humility, all subservience, nevertheless it was firm to the point of being hard. But my last card, the card upon which I was depending, was yet to be played.

"Will you do me the honour to step aside with me, Chevalier?" I commanded rather than besought.

"At your service, sir," said he; and I drew him out of earshot of those others.

"Now, Saint-Eustache, we can talk," said I, with an abrupt change of manner from the coldly arrogant to the coldly menacing. "I marvel greatly at your temerity in pursuing this Iscariot business after learning who I am, at Toulouse two nights ago."

He clenched his hands, and his weak face hardened.

"I would beg you to consider your expressions, monsieur, and to control them," said he in a thick voice.

I vouchsafed him a stare of freezing amazement. "You will no doubt remember in what capacity I find you employed. Nay, keep your hands still, Saint-Eustache. I don't fight catchpolls...and if you give me trouble my men are yonder." And I jerked my thumb over my shoulder. "And now to business. I am not minded to talk all day. I was saying that I marvel at your temerity, and more particularly at your having laid information against Monsieur de Lavedan, and having come here to arrest him, knowing, as you must know, that I am interested in the Vicomte."

"I have heard of that interest, monsieur," said he, with a sneer for which I could have struck him.

"This act of yours," I pursued, ignoring his interpolation, "savours very much of flying in the face of Destiny. It almost seems to me as if you were defying me."

His lip trembled, and his eyes shunned my glance.

"Indeed—indeed, monsieur—" he was protesting, when I cut him short.

"You cannot be so great a fool but that you must realise that if I tell the King what I know of you, you will be stripped of your ill-gotten gains, and broken on the wheel for a double traitor—a betrayer of your fellow-rebels."

"But you will not do that, monsieur?" he cried. "It would be unworthy in you."

At that I laughed in his face. "Heart of God! Are you to be what you please, and do you still expect that men shall be nice in dealing with you? I would do this thing, and, by my faith, Monsieur de Eustache, I will do it, if you compel me!"

He reddened and moved his foot uneasily. Perhaps I did not take the best way with him, after all. I might have confined myself to sowing fear in his heart; that alone might have had the effect I desired; by visiting upon him at the same time the insults I could not repress, I may have aroused his resistance, and excited his desire above all else to thwart me.

"What do you want of me?" he demanded, with a sudden arrogance which almost cast mine into the shade.

"I want you," said I, deeming the time ripe to make a plain tale of it, "to withdraw your men, and to ride back to Toulouse without Monsieur de Lavedan, there to confess to the Keeper of the Seals that your suspicions were unfounded, and that you have culled evidence that the Vicomte has had no relations with Monsieur the King's brother."

He looked at me in amazement—amusedly, almost.

"A likely story that to bear to the astute gentlemen in Toulouse," said he.

"Aye, ma foi, a most likely story," said I. "When they come to consider the profit that you are losing by not apprehending the Vicomte, and can think of none that you are making, they will have little difficulty in believing you."

"But what of this evidence you refer to?"

"You have, I take it, discovered no incriminating evidence—no documents that will tell against the Vicomte?"

"No, monsieur, it is true that I have not—"

He stopped and bit his lip, my smile making him aware of his indiscretion.

"Very well, then, you must invent some evidence to prove that he was in no way associated with the rebellion."

"Monsieur de Bardelys," said he very insolently, "we waste time in idle words. If you think that I will imperil my neck for the sake of serving you or the Vicomte, you are most prodigiously at fault."

"I have never thought so. But I have thought that you might be induced to imperil your neck—as you have it—for its own sake, and to the end that you might save it."

He moved away. "Monsieur, you talk in vain. You have no royal warrant to supersede mine. Do what you will when you come to Toulouse," and he smiled darkly. "Meanwhile, the Vicomte goes with me."

"You have no evidence against him!" I cried, scarce believing that he would dare defy me and that I had failed.

"I have the evidence of my word. I am ready to swear to what I know—that whilst I was here at Lavedan, some weeks ago, I discovered his connection with the rebels."

"And what think you, miserable fool, shall your word weigh against mine?" I cried. "Never fear, Monsieur le Chevalier, I shall be in Toulouse to give you the lie by showing that your word is a word to which no man may attach faith, and by exposing to the King your past conduct. If you think that, after I have spoken, King Louis whom they name the Just will suffer the trial of the Vicomte to go further on your instigation, or if you think that you will be able to slip your own neck from the noose I shall have set about it, you are an infinitely greater fool than I deem you."

He stood and looked at me over his shoulder, his face crimson, and his brows black as a thundercloud.

"All this may betide when you come to Toulouse, Monsieur de Bardelys," said he darkly, "but from here to Toulouse it is a matter of some twenty leagues."

With that he turned on his heel and left me, baffled and angry, to puzzle out the inner meaning of his parting words.

He gave his men the order to mount, and bade Monsieur de Lavedan enter the coach, whereupon Gilles shot me a glance of inquiry. For a second, as I stepped slowly after the Chevalier, I was minded to try armed resistance, and to convert that grey courtyard into a shambles. Then I saw betimes the futility of such a step, and I shrugged my shoulders in answer to my servant's glance.

I would have spoken to the Vicomte ere he departed, but I was too deeply chagrined and humiliated by my defeat. So much so that I had no room in my thoughts even for the very natural conjecture of what Lavedan must be thinking of me. I repented me then of my rashness in coming to Lavedan without having seen the King—as Castelroux had counselled me. I had come indulging vain dreams of a splendid overthrow of Saint-Eustache. I had thought to shine heroically in Mademoiselle's eyes, and thus I had hoped that both gratitude for having saved her father and admiration at the manner in which I had achieved it would predispose her to grant me a hearing in which I might plead my rehabilitation. Once they were accorded me, I did not doubt I should prevail.

Now my dream was all dispelled, and my pride had suffered just such a humiliating fall as the moralists tell us pride must ever suffer. There seemed little left me but go hence with lambent tail, like a dog that has been whipped—my dazzling escort become a mockery but that it served the more loudly to advertise my true impotency.

As I approached the carriage, the Vicomtesse swept suddenly down the steps and came towards me with a friendly smile. "Monsieur de Bardelys," said she, "we are grateful for your intervention in the cause of that rebel my husband."

"Madame," I besought her, under my breath, "if you would not totally destroy him, I beseech you to be cautious. By your leave, I will have my men refreshed, and thereafter I shall take the road to Toulouse again. I can only hope that my intervention with the King may bear better fruit."

Although I spoke in a subdued key, Saint-Eustache, who stood near us, overheard me, as his face very clearly testified.

"Remain here, sir," she replied, with some effusion, "and follow us when you are rested."

"Follow you?" I inquired. "Do you then go with Monsieur de Lavedan?"

"No, Anne," said the Vicomte politely from the carriage. "It will be tiring you unnecessarily. You were better advised to remain here until my return."

I doubt not that the poor Vicomte was more concerned with how she would tire him than with how the journey might tire her. But the Vicomtesse was not to be gainsaid. The Chevalier had sneered when the Vicomte spoke of returning. Madame had caught that sneer, and she swung round upon him now with the vehement fury of a virago.

"He'll not return, you think, you Judas!" she snarled at him, her lean, swarthy face growing very evil to see. "But he shall—by God, he shall! And look to your skin when he does, monsieur the catchpoll, for, on my honour, you shall have a foretaste of hell for your trouble in this matter."

The Chevalier smiled with much restraint. "A woman's tongue," said he, "does no injury."

"Will a woman's arm, think you?" demanded that warlike matron. "You musk-stinking tipstaff, I'll—"

"Anne, my love," implored the Vicomte soothingly, "I beg that you will control yourself."

"Shall I submit to the insolence of this misbegotten vassal? Shall I—"

"Remember rather that it does not become the dignity of your station to address the fellow. We avoid venomous reptiles, but we do not pause to reproach them with their venom. God made them so."

Saint-Eustache coloured to the roots of his hair, then, turning hastily to the driver, he bade him start. He would have closed the door with that, but that madame thrust herself forward.

That was the Chevalier's chance to be avenged. "You cannot go," said he.

"Cannot?" Her cheeks reddened. "Why not, monsieur l'espion?"

"I have no reasons to afford you," he answered brutally. "You cannot go."

"Your pardon, Chevalier," I interposed. "You go beyond your rights in seeking to prevent her. Monsieur le Vicomte is not yet convicted. Do not, I beseech you, transcend the already odious character of your work."

And without more ado I shouldered him aside, and held the door that she might enter.

Suggestions for Lent
HOT CROSS Buns are served in many homes not only on Good Friday but all during Lent. The housewife thus "gets her hand in" to making them extra fine on Good Friday. And when the oven is heated for buns, why not bake the whole dinner?
A Delicious Lenten Dinner
Fish Flakes au Gratin
Baked Potatoes Baked Carrot Slices
Waldorf Salad Custard Hot Cross Buns
Fish Flakes au Gratin
1 can of fish flakes, or salmon; or ½ lb. of dried codfish
1 pint of milk scalded
1 tablespoon butter
¼ lb. cream cheese
6 tablespoons flour
¼ cup bread crumbs
Salt, Pepper, Paprica
If dried codfish is used, soak it several hours first. Canned fish may be used right out of the can. Make a white sauce by melting the butter in a sauce pan, add the flour and seasoning. When thoroughly smooth add the milk. Then melt in half of the cheese. Put fish in a baking dish and pour over it the sauce. Grate or slice thin the rest of the cheese and put it on the top mixed with the bread crumbs. Bake twenty minutes.
Hot Cross Buns
1 cup scalded milk
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
½ yeast cake dissolved in ¼ cup lukewarm water
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
3 cups flour
1 egg
¼ cup seedless raisins
1 cup currents
In the morning mix sugar, butter, salt, in milk. When lukewarm, add dissolved yeast cake, cinnamon, flour, and beaten egg. Mix well. Add raisins and currents. Cover and let rise all day. In the afternoon shape like large biscuits, place one inch apart in pan, let rise. At supper time brush over with beaten egg, and form a cross on the top with a knife. Bake at 375 degrees for twenty-five minutes.
The degree of heat required for the buns will cook the rest of the dinner also. However, the various dishes take different lengths of time. Oven heat control adjusts the temperature exactly, which makes your cooking a joy. Come in and let us tell you more about it.

East Berlin.—What might have been a serious accident proved only to be some excitement when an automobile driven by Mrs. Raymond Zeigler, Washington township, went backwards into the race at Eisenhart's mill on Thursday and did not turn over. The Zeigler family moved to the Eisenhart farm at Eisenhart's mill Thursday. Mrs. Zeigler drove the car, and when she wanted to stop the car at the barn which stands on a slight elevation, the brakes refused to hold it and consequently it drifted down hill over a 12-foot bank into the race. Mrs. Zeigler was uninjured.

AGE LOVES THE SPRING

It was good to see the spring arrive
In eighteen hundred and ninety-five,
I was glad as a healthy young boy could be
To see the leaves coming back to the tree;
And in nineteen hundred with joy I'd shout
To see the grass and the tulips out;
But then I rejoiced in a small boy's way
And I wasn't so glad as I am today.

I was glad to see spring in nineteen-ten
And I sang with joy at its coming then,
But I've noticed this, with each passing year:
My heart leaps faster when buds appear,
And I welcome the robins with greater glee
Than I used to do, for it seems to me
The older I grow, the more I yearn
For the winter's passing and spring's return.

Spring is lovely when life is young,
But its deepest charms to the old belong;
Now I thank the Lord when the skies are blue
That another winter I've weathered through,
And I thank the Lord He has let me see
The leaves come back to the maple tree,
And I thank the Lord He has let me stay
For the blossom time in another May.

Yes, laugh if you will, you youngsters small,
But you know not the beauty of spring at all,
And you little guess what it means to see
The buds once more on the apple tree,
But an old heart, stung by the winter blast,
Is truly glad when he sees at last
The grass grow green and the birds awing,
For the Lord has given him another spring!

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

Just a song at twilight,
When the lamps begin to glow
From every little window
In the valley down below.

They wink and blink and glitter
Like little fireflies.
Whose tiny lanterns flicker
Beneath the darkening skies, sang Grandmother Goose's pianola as she and dear Uncle Lucky sat in the living room, where a green box of geraniums bloomed at the south window and a bunch of peacock feathers winked their hundred eyes from a vase on the old mantelpiece.

Pretty soon Grandfather Clock went ticky, tock, tock, and struck the hour of six—the hour mentioned in the last story when Grandmother Goose telephoned the little rabbit that his dear, kind Uncle Lucky would start for the Old Bramble Patch.

"Goodness gracious meebus! Time for me to be going!" exclaimed the old gentleman rabbit, and putting on his old wedding stovepipe hat, he tied his blue silk polkadot handkerchief over the top and under his chin and put on his goggles and wound his gold watch and chain. Then with a "Goodbye, Grandmother Goose!" he hopped into the Luckymobile and set out for his red-shingled house on the corner of Lettuce Avenue and Carrot St.

But, Oh, dear me! It was growing later by the minute and Little Miss Mousie, the old gentleman rabbit's tiny housekeeper, was beginning to worry. Scampering down to the front gate, she looked up Lettuce Avenue, but he was nowhere in sight. "Oh, dear," she cried, "I hope nothing dreadful has happened to him!" And then she wiped a tear from one of her blue eyes as she looked toward the Shady Forest and up at the new moon, but the dear old gentleman bunny wasn't there, either! "Oh, dear and oh, dear," she sighed again. "Something dreadful must have happened!" when, all of a sudden, there sounded the honk! honk! of an auto horn, and the next minute the Luckymobile came tearing along, with Mr. Wicked Wolf close behind.

"Hold the door open!" shouted brave Uncle Lucky, and although the Luckymobile was going at full speed, out he hopped and in through the door before Mr. Wicked Wolf bumped his nose against it.

"You thought you had me, didn't you? But all you got was a black and blue Nose you'll carry for many a day. Now what, old wolf, have you to say?" cried the funny old gentleman rabbit through the keyhole. My goodness, wasn't the old wolf angry. But what could he do? Nothing, but turn about and go home to nurse his bumped-up nose.

And now I suppose you are wondering what happened to the Luckymobile? Well, I'll tell you. It rolled along for a little way, but not very far, for careful Uncle Lucky had not forgotten to turn off the power, although he was all excited. Then it stopped right in front of the Little Red Garage, when out strutted the Old Red Rooster and parked it safely inside, and after locking the door, went to bed in the hayloft.

And in the next story if the tiny cricket on the hearth doesn't powder her nose with Little Miss Mousie's powder puff, I'll tell you more about the little rabbits.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE SILENT TALKER

THERE is nothing so restful, soothing and inspiring as to talk with some one—who doesn't talk.

My friend and I took a walk the other evening. I have known him for eleven years. Sometimes we sit in the library and talk for hours—books, business, art, people, nations, furniture, flowers, newspapers and a world of whatnots. Then we look at our watch! It is two o'clock! Then, of course to bed. But the time trotted so fast.

But about the walk. This time we didn't talk. We just looked and thought. We saw beauty in the sky that was intoxicating. A feathery covering of clouds had made the heavens a net-work that moved like a silken robe in a light wind. Stars sparkled through the little pathways like diamonds. And a full moon played the hours away.

I wondered about Heaven that I used to hear my father preach about. I remembered my mother's prayers. I melted in stature to that of a boy with bare feet sitting on the bank of a creek, far in the country where I had gone to work. It was so silent that night—and a moon came out to talk and play. Moons have ways.

When you hide away from the busy city or the activity of your town, you get a new viewpoint. You see. You understand much that was vague and complex with people around.

My friend and I knew each other. We had so often talked about our plans, our ideals, our discouragements, our likes and dislikes. So that when beauty arose before us, we became suddenly silent. For beauty quiets everything but the heart.

And so we talked and talked. But we talked in symbols, signs and thoughts—silently.

It is so good to have a friend. It is better to understand a friend. And it is still better to know how to forgive that friend and to overlook the lacks in that friend.

There is no argument so powerful as that which is silent.

WOMAN DOING GOOD WORK

"I have been bad off with stomach and liver trouble and bloating for many years. No doctors or medicine helped me. On the advice of my druggist, I bought a bottle of MAYR'S and I don't want to miss a single dose. It has given me more benefit than all the medicine I have ever taken. I feel I am doing good to recommend it to others." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at People's Drug Store and druggists everywhere.—adv.

Ouch! Rheumatism! Rub The Pain Away

Stop drugging! Rub soothing, penetrating St. Jacobs Oil right into your sore, stiff, aching joints, and relief comes instantly. St. Jacobs Oil is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and cannot burn the skin.

Get a 35 cent bottle of St. Jacobs Oil at any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pain, soreness and stiffness. In use for 65 years for rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains.—adv.

Here's Real Relief from Neuritis

In 24 Hours Pains Cease and You Get Rest and Comfort Again.

Torturing pains—the kind that pierce and burn and never seem to let up—that rob a man of his sleep—that make him just a bag of nerves and all worn out.

Those are the pains that dope and coal tar products can only relieve. You've got to get something more lasting.

The quickest, safest and surest way to get rid of the persistent, nerve-racking pains of neuritis is to get a bottle of Allenrhu Special Formula No. 2. Be sure you get No. 2, which comes in capsule form. Take these little dark green capsules as directed and notice how in about 24 hours they have considerably reduced if not entirely banished those severe, torturing pains that have caused you so many sleepless nights. Continue for two or three days more or until the pains have entirely disappeared.

It doesn't matter how long you may have suffered or whether your Neuritis is in the shoulder, arm, neck or legs, Alenrhu Special Formula No. 2 will stop the torture and give you speedy relief. People's Drug Store or any good druggist will be glad to supply you.—adv.

ALL OUT OF SORTS?

So Was This Gettysburg Woman Who Tells Her Experience

All too often women accept their pains and aches as natural to their sex. They fail to realize that weak kidneys are often to blame for that backache, those headaches, dizzy spells and that tired, depressed feeling. Thousands have found new health and strength by helping the weakened kidneys with Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. This Getytsburg case is one of many:

Mrs. Joseph Spangler, 138 Water St., says: "My kidneys were weak and I suffered with bearing down pains in the small of my back. My back was sore, too, and the pains became worse when I stooped. It was all I could do to straighten again. I didn't rest at night and always felt tired. I was all out of sorts. It didn't take Doan's Pills from the People's Drug Store long to end the trouble."

ATTRACTIVE WOMEN

If You Would Be Attractive You Must Be Healthy

A beautiful woman is always admired. There are many types of beauty. But no woman can be truly beautiful unless she is healthy. Radiant vitality is always attractive however plain a woman's features may be.

Many a woman has found her health improved thru the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Weakness, loss of weight, and a pale complexion were a few of the things of which Mrs. J. C. Taylor of Box 211, Tallahassee, Florida, complained before she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. "I could not even sit down and talk to a friend for any length of time," she states, "I would forget what I was talking about and felt so blue." Mrs. Taylor is so pleased with the work of the Vegetable Compound that she keeps a bottle of it in the house at all times—and when it is empty, her husband makes sure that she has a new bottle. "I have regained my strength," Mrs. Taylor writes. "I can do all my housework now and I feel just fine."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made from roots and herbs and has been growing in popularity among women for over fifty years.
